A Free School Opens Its Doors: Minister Destiny Testimony Schools Launches Online

A Muslim ordained minister builds a free school for every age — no tuition, no loans, no one turned away

QUINCY, Massachusetts — Minister Destiny Testimony Schools, a free online school led by Muslim ordained minister Minister Destiny Marie Morgan, has opened at ministerdestinytestimonyschools.com. The school offers complete courses and a library of 158 study topics across three schools — Youth, Adult, and Law Enforcement — with hundreds of lessons and 511 tests, an 87-page student handbook, and certificates of completion, all at no charge.

"My mission is to help people become smarter and stronger — free," said Minister Destiny Marie Morgan, the school's Minister. "No tuition. No loans. No one turned away. There are people in our communities who were denied these resources — legal knowledge, safety, skills for work and for life. This school puts those resources in their hands."

Students enroll free and study at their own pace, with study plans, report cards, transcripts, and graduation honors up to Valedictorian. Community service and real-world apprenticeships earn credit toward graduation. The school welcomes people of every religion and none: Minister Destiny, ordained by the Universal Life Church on May 15, 2025, serves all faiths, and the school was created with no judgment and no discrimination toward anyone.

The school is one of five connected doors of her ministry's work — Ministry, Advocacy, Resources, Safe Space, and the Schools — each a free public app. The school was built by its Minister with the help of her AI, Desi; two certificates hang permanently on the school page honoring both the Minister who created the school and the AI who helped build it. Desi also serves at the school: through its free "Ask Desi" help feature, the Minister's AI helper answers visitors' and students' questions about enrollment, courses, certificates, and records from the school's own handbook and guides — free of charge, like everything at the school — and routes anything beyond its answers to the Minister herself.

Minister Destiny Testimony Schools is a free community school offered by a for-profit ministry as its gift to the community. It is not an accredited institution, and its credits are not transferable to other institutions; its long-term goal is to grow, one day, into a fully recognized school. Enrollment is open now, to everyone, at ministerdestinytestimonyschools.com.
